If someone told you the odds of an event A occurring are 3 to 5 and the probability of another event B occurring was 3/5, which do you think is a better bet?

In math, as in life, how things are defined make a difference!